Introduction

Starting with the 2021 state legislative session, the Office of Planning & Budgeting (OPB) is transitioning from our homegrown BillTracker system to LobbyGov, a platform used extensively in bill analysis and legislative affairs in our state. LobbyGov notifies OPB when a tracked bill has a hearing, when it is amended, and when it moves. Additionally, LobbyGov enables stakeholders across the University to assess legislation throughout the process.

University stakeholders who have been asked to review legislation can access LobbyGov at ww.lobbygov.com, using your UW NetID to log in (you may need to select SAML Login if you are not automatically redirected). If you need a user account, please contact the Policy, Planning & State Operations team.

This guide provides a general overview of LobbyGov features. More information regarding bill tracking and analysis can be found on our Bill Tracking and Legislative Resources page.

Permissions: Liaison vs. Reviewer

There are two user permission levels within LobbyGov, Liaisons and Reviewers. Stakeholders who are designated as Liaisons coordinate bill analysis for larger departments at the University. OPB will serve as a Liaison for most departments. In LobbyGov, a Liaison will receive bills that fall under their department's area of expertise, and they will assign the bill to specific Reviewers to provide assessments. Once the assessment is complete, Liaisons can review and approve assessments before submitting to OPB.

Liaisons will receive the following email after a bill has been assigned to their department:
